Mural @ Cnr West Nook Rd & Main St

Lot 1 Soul Searching

From a place of hope and plenty, from forests and farms, Gothic grandeur of mountains, splendour of stars,
We're always searching for 'soul' within our life, Creating myths, legends to explain what's wrong - what's right.
We've testaments and epics for Man's story throughout time,
Yet still we go on searching for Inner Self – "Divine".
If eyes, then, are windows to the 'soul' contained within,
Let searching wind soon find us, so dreaming can begin.

Lot 2 Beyond the Barriers

In our material world we tend to build barriers which inhibit our ability to see beyond the walls which enclose us.

To look beyond our physical presence, opens our minds to the beauty and majesty of the world around us, and, a little imagination can open a world of dreams.

Lot 3 Wish upon a dream

The child is a symbol of hope, filled with the plentiful resources of Tasmania. She makes a wish by blowing on a dandelion as the gentle wind forms the clouds into an ever changing dreamscape. The scene unfolding is framed by a window between daydream and sleep.

Lot 6
Chrysalis Dreaming

Time is continuum of change;
And we are but an element of its journey. Within this journey exists a cycle of life.
As day follows night;
So too a butterfly emerges from its chrysalis; Capturing the dreams, vibrancy, energy and spirit of life renewed.

Moondream

In a land of plenty where dreams and wishes can come true, immigrants arrive with only their suitcases and hopes for a better life. From the cities to the outback, from the coral reefs to the snow on cradle mountain, we live together peacefully...

Lot 8
A Little Rabbit's Tale

This mural is an adaptation from the classic children's book "The Velveteen Rabbit" (now in public domain), written in 1922 by Margery Williams. It describes the bond reciprocated between a child and his favourite soft toy, and the conflicting emotions experienced when circumstances change. The story's content (How toys become real) engages the audience by juxtaposing typography with visuals, therefore reinforcing the theme, "Windows of our Dreams".
